We all have challenging missions to fly

Who are your trusted partners – your wingmen – who you go to battle with every day?

The missiles of adversity test our resolve and our relationships

A close-up, over-the-shoulder view of a pilot in a cockpit. The pilot is wearing a helmet and is looking out of the canopy. The sky is clear blue. In the distance, a white fighter jet is flying away from the viewer, leaving a bright orange and yellow trail behind it. The text "Our wingmen can help shoot them down" is overlaid in yellow on the right side of the image.

A person in a red shirt is climbing a steep, vertical rock face. The climber is positioned near the top of the frame, leaning against the rock. The background shows a vast, rugged mountain landscape with rocky peaks and valleys, under a blue sky with scattered clouds. The overall scene conveys a sense of adventure and challenge.

LEADERS LIFT

NEVER FLY
SOLO[®]

“Leadership is solving problems.

The day soldiers stop bringing you their problems, is the day they have either lost confidence that you can help or concluded you do not care.”

General Colin Powell
